Integral Diagnostics partners with Siemens Healthineers Enterprise Services and Solutions in a healthcare technology Global Pilot

Melbourne, 6 September 2016: Integral Diagnostics Limited (ASX: IDX) is pleased to announce that it has entered into a Memorandum of Understanding with Siemens Healthineers Enterprise Services and Solutions to run a Global Pilot over the next 3 years to enhance the effectiveness and efficiencies of the existing healthcare services.

Partnering with Siemens Healthineers as part of its Global Pilot will enable Integral Diagnostics to identify, and have access to, technological solutions ahead of the market. These solutions will have the potential of providing greater focus and efficiencies for the Company's people, patients and referrers. In addition, Integral Diagnostics will have access to process improvement tools not currently deployed in Australia.

With emerging technologies that will focus on patient and referrer needs, combined with optimisation of both physical and human resources, IDX through this partnership will better position itself to understand the application of technology and development of new systems and processes for enhanced patient care.

Commenting on the Global Pilot with Siemens Healthineers, Integral Diagnostics' CEO John Livingston said:

"As the demands on Australia's healthcare sector rapidly increase, improved technologies will enhance levels of patient care further while also driving efficiencies within the sector. The use of data and data processing will become critical to improve efficiency, quality and health outcomes for our patients over the next three to five years.

To ensure Integral Diagnostics is able to deliver value and optimal care for our patients and referrers, we are focused on ensuring we continue to invest in technologies, facilities and people. Being part of the Global Pilot Program will allow us to better explore and have early access to innovative and disruptive technologies that are driving a review of healthcare models and creating new opportunities to meet the needs of patients."

Michael Shaw, Managing Director of Siemens Healthineers in Australia and New Zealand commented on the partnership:

"Australians have access to one of the best health systems in the world, but the system is under mounting pressure to produce higher quality outcomes at less cost. Through this partnership we are aiming to jointly discover and translate new opportunities to shape and realise advanced standards of care and novel business models that can deliver efficient healthcare services to Australians.

For Siemens Healthineers, being a partner goes beyond a unique portfolio of products and solutions. Already today, we are partnering with many customers worldwide. Our almost 4,000 collaborations are the basis to work on exciting topics and projects, such as this Global Pilot Project with Integral Diagnostics, to jointly drive healthcare further."
